World Wide parenting fails

The closest I come to being a parent is serving as a doting "god-mami" to my best friend's two kids.

I don't even have so much as an aquarium at home, and with good reason. Out of fear of reprisal from PETA, I won't detail what I (accidentally) did to some of my father's fish when I was young.

Still despite a lack of living creatures to care for, I'd put my potential parenting skills up against those of some moms and dads in the pop-o-sphere.

A few sorry spectacles spring to mind, but my current target is Heidi Ladrow, aka the hyper-defensive mother of "Baby Gaga."

Ladrow apparently believed it was a great idea to dress her 3-year-old daughter up as the super-sexualized and kinda creepy pop phenomenon Lady Gaga with the intentions of spoofing "Telephone."

And this wasn't for some family reunion talent show, mind you.

The resulting video—featuring the heavily made up toddler with handcuffs and bikini-clad backup dancers—was made with the help of a professional director and then released onto the World Wide Web.

Even if, as Ladrow contended on CBS's "Early Show," her toddler daughter enjoyed the experience, the fact remains there is no way this tot can comprehend the future ramifications of her Internet infamy.

Sadly, Ladrow is far from the only parent who deserves a visit from the pop division of DCFS.

That distinction is shared with some of the parents of the little girls from the "Single Ladies" FAIL last month. These talented World of Dance competitors, some as young as 8, attracted attention and outrage because they were dressed in mini-"Moulin Rouge" attire.

Worsening matters, the scantily clad children were doing moves more "Players Club" than Playskool.

So what? argued some parents, including one of the girls' fathers, Cory Miller.

"You're looking at it as a proud kid who has really high energy, who doesn't really know what she's doing," Miller told "Inside Edition" of the girls' performance.

I can't quibble with his assessment of his own daughter's awareness. However, I'm 100 percent sure that he, as a grown-ass father, knew exactly what she was doing—and how it could look to others.

And there are even greater chances that others—a whole host of others, in fact—can see the videos.

Some parenting rules have switched in the viral video age, and it's as obvious as NeNe Leakes' nose job. Being clueless, or even defensive about that fact and exposing your children to widespread ridicule, demonstrates parenting skills not even fit for a fish.

And I should know. Just ask the ghosts of those goldfish.

Former Gov. Rod Blagojevich and his wife, Patti, leave their home Thursday on their way to court. NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

Testimony: Blago obsessed with cash

Chicago Tribune

A former confidant portrayed ex-Gov. Rod Blagojevich on Thursday as so obsessed with raising political cash that he tried to swap an appointment to the U.S. Senate to derail an ethics bill that would crimp his fundraising prowess.

In 2008, Blagojevich was in such a frenzy to block the ethics legislation that he agreed to elevate then-Illinois Senate President Emil Jones Jr. to the U.S. Senate post held by Barack Obama if Jones would bury the ethics reform, testified Alonzo "Lon" Monk, a longtime Blagojevich friend and aide.

When that backfired, Blagojevich then launched a hardball drive to squeeze millions of dollars in donations out of state contractors and others before the fundraising limits in the ethics bill took effect in 2009, said Monk, who was testifying as part of a plea deal with prosecutors.

As governor, Blagojevich also fretted that he wasn't making enough and worked to arrange a $12,000-a-month, do-little job for his wife, Patti, with developer buddy Antoin "Tony" Rezko, Monk alleged.

Blagojevich's alleged dash for cash also was apparent on the first secret recordings played for the jury at the trial. A frantic Blagojevich could be heard swearing and almost yelling at his brother, Robert, the head of his campaign fund at the time, asking whether a fundraising goal of $4 million was realistic by the end of 2008. The brother is also on trial.

The ethics legislation was set to go into effect in weeks, and Blagojevich sounded almost desperate to get his brother to push donors.

"We've gotta somehow get there. Don't pay any bills," Blagojevich said, sounding like he was only half-joking. His brother responded by saying maybe they could scrap sending out Christmas cards.

Only a fundraising event held by state Sen. James DeLeo (D-Chicago) had met its goal, Blagojevich said. Campaign contributions from asphalt magnate Michael Vondra had dropped off, Blagojevich said on the recording. "The Greeks have dropped off," he added.

In his testimony, Monk said Blagojevich's timing in stoking up fundraising pressure was terrible.

Barack Obama's drive for the presidency was sucking up available political cash in Illinois, the economy was in the dumps, Blagojevich's longtime fundraising czar Christopher Kelly was under indictment and out of the picture and reports of federal probes into Blagojevich's administration were scaring away donors.

Sears for groceries

Chicago Tribune

Yep. The company that has been delivering refrigerators and washing machines to U.S. homes for decades is looking into delivering something new.

The service, an expansion of Sears' year-old MyGofer online shopping portal, quietly launched on Memorial Day in Manhattan and in the Hamptons, according to spokesman Tom Aiello. The home delivery service, which brings groceries, prescriptions, electronics and other goods from its Kmart stores, is slated to roll out to other markets including Chicago-area Kmart stores later this summer, he said.

Sears Holdings Corp. launched MyGofer last year as a way to combine bricks-and-mortar retailing with Amazon-style online shopping. The mygofer.com website allows shoppers to search tens of thousands of goods online.

Sears also converted a shuttered Kmart store in Joliet into a warehouse and showroom with a drive-through and renamed the Kmart store MyGofer. The store, which opened in May, is the only one of its kind in the country.

The retailer's plans to start home delivery of groceries and other products appeared as part of a video highlighting Sears' online prowess that Imran Jooma, Sears' top online executive, showed during a speech Wednesday.

Cops seek help finding suspect

Chicago police Thursday issued a community alert asking the public for help to capture a man suspected of trying to sexually assault a woman in Lakeview.

The woman was attacked at about 5:45 p.m. Tuesday as she walked to her car in the 1700 block of West Fletcher Avenue, police said.

As she walked to the car, a man approached her from behind and pushed her into her car, police said. He punched her, pulled her hair and tried to pull the woman's shorts off, police said.

The man's attack was thwarted after the woman yelled, causing the man to flee, police said.

The attacker is described as being between 25 and 35 years old. He was wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt, khaki cargo shorts and work boots.

Anyone with information about this incident is asked to call police at 312-744-8261.

Daley says city appreciates Oprah

Chicagoans' respect for Oprah Winfrey's privacy may have been misinterpreted as a lack of appreciation for the talk show queen, Mayor Daley said Thursday.

Daley was responding to recent comments by Winfrey's longtime partner, Steadman Graham, who said he didn't think the city understands the "value of her as a human being and what she's done."

"Chicago's really different, in the sense that—and I think everybody appreciated Oprah, there's no way—one thing about Chicago is, we respect your privacy," Daley said. "She could be in a restaurant, she could be at the East Bank Club, walking down the street. People don't run up to her."

Graham told Fox Chicago "I really don't think they appreciate her" when he was asked what Winfrey ending her show here means to the city. But Daley said Chicagoans simply let people have their space, be they stars or anyone else.

"It's very interesting. West Coast, East Coast, paparazzi would be running around, chasing her up and down," Daley said. "Here's Chicago, we weren't taught that way. We have people out to restaurants or dinners. ... You say 'Hi, how are ya?' or something, but you're not in her face."

"I know Steadman, I don't know what the comment was about, but I think everybody has really respected her, but most importantly always kept her privacy really important to her in her own life," Daley added.

Solo sailor, 16, feared in trouble

2 LOS ANGELES A 16-year-old Southern California girl attempting a solo sail around the world was feared in trouble Thursday in the frigid, heaving southern Indian Ocean after her emergency beacons began signaling and communication was lost.

Authorities said a search effort was under way for Abby Sutherland. Conditions quickly can become perilous for any sailor exposed to the elements in that part of the world.

Abby last communicated with her family at 6 a.m. and reported 30-foot swells but was not in distress, family spokesman Christian Pinkston said. An hour later the family was notified that her emergency beacons had been activated, and there was no further communication.

Her brother, Zac, who sailed around the world at age 17, told L.A. radio station KNX that Abby was in a heavy storm at the time she called home.

Bird effort challenged

1 FORT JACKSON, La. Rescuers gently washing the goo from pelicans make for some of the few hopeful images from the disaster on the Gulf of Mexico, yet some scientists contend those efforts are good for little more than warming hearts.

Critics call bird-washing a wasteful exercise in feel-good futility that simply buys doomed creatures a bit more time. They say the money and man-hours would be better spent restoring wildlife habitat or saving endangered species.

In the seven weeks since oil began erupting from a mile-deep well after a drilling rig explosion in the Gulf of Mexico, more than 150 pelicans, gulls, sandwich terns and other birds have been treated at a warehouse-turned-refugee encampment 70 miles south of New Orleans.

A total of 473 birds in the Gulf region have been collected alive with visible oil; 117 oiled birds have been found dead. More are on the way, as oil slicks assault beaches and marshes that serve as breeding areas for many species.

It's all part of a broader animal care initiative overseen by federal agencies and operated largely by nonprofit groups, with funding from BP PLC. Other centers focus on turtles and marine mammals.

"All of us here taking care of the wildlife feel it's important," said Rhonda Murgatroyd of Wildlife Response Services. "We can't just leave them there—somebody has to take care of them."

A noble sentiment, said Ron Kendall, director of the Institute of Environmental and Human Health at Texas Tech University. But the hard reality is that many, if not

Danine Birtel washes a pelican Sunday that was covered in oil at the International Bird Rescue Research Center in Louisiana. REUTERS

THE RESCUE PROCESS

The birds are scrubbed clean and held a week or more to recover. Then a Coast Guard plane flies them to Tampa Bay in Florida for release—far enough away, workers hope, that the birds won't return to oiled waters and get soaked again. Birds treated from this disaster have been tagged, and none has been spotted in oil again.

most, oiled creatures probably won't live long after being cleansed and freed, he said.

"Once they've gone through that much stress, particularly with all the human handling and confinement, it's very difficult," Kendall said. "Some species might tolerate it better than others, but when you compare the benefits to the costs ... I am skeptical."

Dan Anderson, a professor emeritus of conservation biology at the University of California at Davis, said last week he questions how well the rescue missions succeed but doesn't oppose them.

"If nothing else, we're morally obligated to save birds that seem to be savable," Anderson said.

New slogan for pork industry

3 It's been known for more than two decades as "The Other White Meat." But the pork industry thinks it's time the meat got a new slogan. The National Pork Board in Des Moines plans to replace its iconic slogan after 23 years. Officials hope a new tagline can help improve sales that have been flat for decades.

Ikea recalls window blinds

4 Ikea is recalling 3.36 million window blinds and shades after a child nearly strangled on a cord. In the roller blinds, in which material gathers at the top of the blind when it's adjusted, a child can strangle when the blind's bead chain is not attached to the wall or floor with a tension device.

GM still likes Chevy name

5 Relax, Chevrolet fanatics. Turns out you can take your "Chevy to the levee" or any other darn place you please. General Motors Co. on Thursday backed off what it called a "poorly worded" internal memo that asked employees to refer to the brand only as "Chevrolet" instead of its long-standing and well-known nickname.

Kenyan police nab serial killer

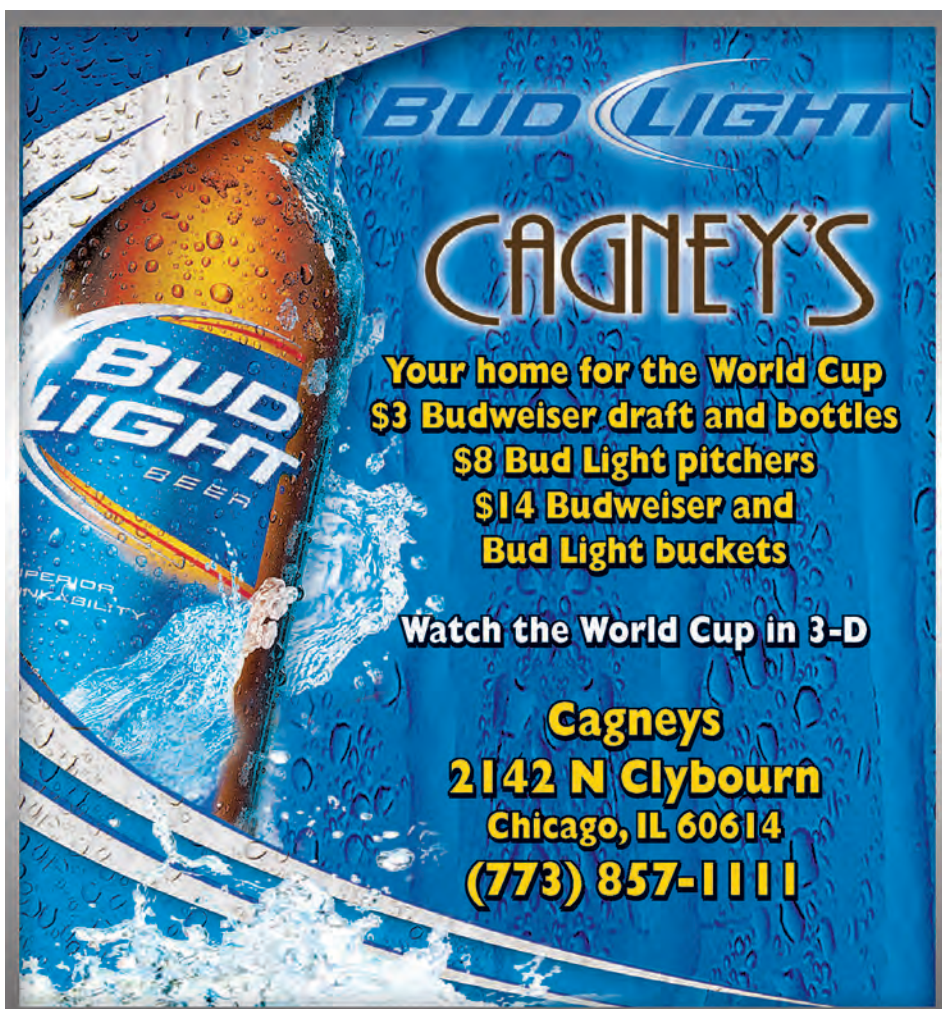

6 Kenyan police Thursday said a man who they had initially arrested on kidnapping charges has confessed to killing 19 people in three years and claimed his target was to slay 100. Richard Katola, a top police official, said in the last three days that the suspect, Richard Onyancha, has led police to several murder scenes.

Parade of champions

Chicago Tribune

City officials are preparing for what could be hundreds of thousands of fans in the Loop for the city's Blackhawks celebration, a parade and victory party kicking off Friday morning.

The parade will start at about 10:30 a.m. from the intersection of Wacker Drive and Washington Street, proceed east on Washington before going north on Michigan Avenue to Wacker Drive. At Wacker and Michigan, a rally featuring a host of speakers will begin between 11 and 11:30 a.m., officials said.

"Chicago's a great city and we will celebrate in style," said Jose Santiago, executive director of the city's Office of Emergency Management and Communications. "And we'll always keep in mind safety, security for everyone that will be traveling to this city."

Traffic closures will begin at about 10:30 a.m., officials said. The Blackhawks team and front office personnel will ride double-decker buses for the parade. Megan McDonald, executive director for the Mayor's Office of Special Events, said the rally should wrap up between noon and 1 p.m.

City officials said they couldn't predict how many people will turn out for the parade, but noted 350,000 people celebrated downtown in 2005 when the White Sox won the World Series.

"If you're bringing small children down there, just keep in mind we want people to be safe," McDonald advised.

PARTYING WITH THE CUP

Blackhawks players, fans celebrate title as hockey Holy Grail tours city

Chicago Tribune

With Blackhawks players acting as tour guides, the beer-soaked Stanley Cup took a victory lap unlike any the city has ever seen Thursday.

Wherever hockey's Holy Grail went, adulation followed. Elated fans cheered the trophy as it made a daylong pilgrimage from O'Hare to Rush Street, with stops at a suburban restaurant, a North Side bar and the United Center in between.

During the summer, each player will assume custody of the 118-year-old chalice for at least 24 hours. They can take it home or wherever they like and do whatever they want with it.

But before the Cup jets off to far flung places such as Winnipeg, Canada, and Stara Lubovna, Slovakia, the Hawks made sure to introduce it to both Chicago's long-suffering hockey fans and its unabashed bandwagon jumpers.

"We'll probably parade it around town," Hawks captain Jonathan Toews promised as the team's plane landed at O'Hare shortly before sunrise Thursday. "It'll be awesome."

And awesome it was.

The road-weary Blackhawks arrived at a private terminal at O'Hare shortly before 4 a.m., little more than six hours after their thrilling 4-3 overtime victory over the Philadelphia Flyers. Fire trucks welcomed the plane with cannons that shot giant arcs of water over the aircraft as it taxied to the terminal.

Toews said the plane ride was rowdy, befitting for one of the youngest teams in the NHL and a Stanley Cup celebration nearly 50 years in the making.

"No one was sitting down, nobody was relaxing," Toews said. "It was pretty loud in there." From O'Hare, the team moved to Harry Caray's restaurant in Rosemont. Players could be seen drinking beer as dance music played.

Following the gathering, some Hawks took the cup to Roscoe

Village for drinks at the Pony Inn. With bouncers preventing fans from joining the private party, the players downed Jager bombs.

Outside, hundreds of screaming fans swarmed the players' idling limos as they waited for a glimpse of the city's newest champions. At the bar's backdoor, several kids asked to see the trophy—a wish Toews personally granted as he brought it to them.

Defenseman Brent Seabrook also ventured out into the crowd, where he signed autographs for several minutes before hopping into a taxi.

By 9 a.m., the party had broken up and the Hawks began to go their separate ways.

Toews and a few friends headed to Ann Sather in Lakeview. Carrying his own Sharpie pen, the Blackhawks center signed newspapers, hockey sweaters, napkins and anything else star-struck fans placed in front of him.

Meanwhile, the Cup traveled to the United Center, where it had its picture taken on the home ice and in the locker room.

Later that afternoon, Hawks defenseman Brian Campbell loaded the trophy into a party bus and took it to dinner at Tavern On Rush. The pair were met there by other team members, many of whom had already shaved or significantly trimmed their scraggly playoff beards.

The Cup's appearance caused a massive traffic jam in the Gold Coast as rubbernecking fans slowed their cars and onlookers clogged the sidewalks.

The chaotic scene stunned left wing Bryan Bickell, who said he had trouble envisioning Friday's parade following Thursday's massive reception.

"It has been pretty awesome," he said. "I'm nervous to see what the next 24 hours will bring."

Rockit Bar & Grill also was on the agenda, the resulting chaos shutting down Hubbard Street. In front of the bar's floor-to-ceiling, second-floor windows, players including Andrew Ladd and Kris Versteeg hoisted the Cup to a gathering crowd. Ladd even showered the onlookers with a bottle of alcohol.

Revival a work of art

It's not that the Blackhawks won the Stanley Cup. It's the way they did it—hard to fathom.

We're basically talking a three-year turnaround, coming from nowhere, a franchise left for dead, trading on traditions and names that were 40 years old.

I'm not here to teach, but there is a lesson for everyone: You can come back. Despite mistakes, Chicago fans will reserve a place in their hearts and minds for you, waiting for your triumphant return.

Oh, and there were mistakes. I've never seen a franchise chase off so many of its valuable players, and I'm not just talking Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull. I'm thinking Jeremy Roenick and Ed Belfour, but this isn't about complaints.

A quick word of thanks to some people who aren't even here to enjoy this. One is Dale Tallon. They guy built 90 percent of this team, made great trades like getting Patrick Sharp and Kris Versteeg and Andrew Ladd. Then he signs Antti Niemi, then Marian Hossa.

Of course, after all of that, he's no longer GM, but that's a "Twilight Zone" episode for another day. I'll just say thanks.

Thanks also to Denis Savard. It's got to be hard for the guy to know he coached this team last year, but he's still a lifer around here.

But I suppose the biggest thanks go to Rocky Wirtz and John McDonough for bringing this corpse back from the dead.

And boy were they dead. A couple of years ago, the franchise pretty much gave away tickets to a game—on a Friday night. I know. I was there.

Here's the big secret, the winning formula to launching a successful organization in Chicago: Be a fan.

I know McDonough remembered what it was like to watch the Blackhawks in the 1960s, and obviously Rocky remembered what it was all about.

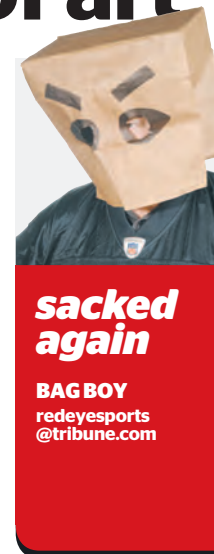

So thanks for getting great young players and for bringing in class acts like Scotty and Stan Bowman along, too, and hiring Joel Quenneville.

We're so good and young, it's scary. Even Michael Jordan, it took him seven years.

It took this group three.

We're ahead of schedule. Lets not blow it.

Cup dream date

Somewhere in the midst of my Patron-fueled Hawks title celebration, I found myself staring at the Cup thinking about how cool it is that each player gets to spend a day with it. How could you possibly fit everything you want to do with it in just 24 hours? You make a list. Here are the Top Ten Things I'd Do with the Stanley Cup for a Day.

10 One-night stand

I'd flick on a little Color Me Bad, pour some two-buck Chuck and spoon the night away with this silver beauty.

9 Stupid stick

I'd institute a one-day rule: Anytime Blago says something stupid, I beat the bejesus outta him with it.

8 Fix the oil spill

Plugging the Gulf leak with the Cup is pure genius compared with the historical ignorance BP showed by trying to throw garbage at it.

7 Big night out

Sorry Snoop, Lord Stanley was the godfather of the pimp cup and Chicagoans would make sure I drink free all night.

6 Bling

You think a 38-pound trophy around my neck looks dumb? You've got Cup envy, my friend, and you can ask Chris Pronger all about that.

5 Drinking games

Even though my table would look like it got into a fight with Shredder, bouncing quarters into this behemoth is a challenge I couldn't pass up.

4 Hello, Wrigley Field

Someone's got to remind the Cubs that it's possible to win a title in Chicago.

3 Cup cam

I'd install a hidden camera so we could see the debauchery that goes down when Kaner and Big Buff get their paws on it.

Patrick Kane
CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

2 Personal parade

I'd rent a U-Haul, climb up top "Teen Wolf"-style and cruise through Philly with the Cup held high above my head. Who wants to be Stiles?

1 Spin the Cup

After winning the Cup, I'm sure Rocky Wirtz would let the Ice Crew gals out at the UC for a friendly game with yours truly. No, you can't come.

Hail the Hawks

The Blackhawks are Stanley Cup champs, but these five are still just these five. Join 'em at redeychicago.com/5on5.

TOPIC	PHIL THOMPSON plthompson@tribune.com	TRACY SWARTZ twitter.com/tracyswartz	CHRIS SOSA chsosa@tribune.com	ERNEST WILKINS erwilkins@tribune.com	SOXMAN redeychicago.com/5on5
1 How can you tell the Blackhawks are Stanley Cup champions?	When Tracy tells me that this is no "dress" rehearsal, then points to Chrissy Pronger.	I checked to see if I'm a Flyers goalie then I realized nothing went through my legs.	Finland's making a fortune selling tickets to Niemi's boyhood home.	There's a big championship celebration going on in Wrigleyville.	There are a lot of clean-shaven gents around town today.
2 What will you chant at the Blackhawks parade through the city?	"Characters welcome." I only use network TV slogans. For the Cubs: "We know drama."	"Yeeeeehawks! Lemme ride!"	"Bye bye, beardies!"	"This is what winning looks like, other Chicago teams!" clap-clap-clapclapclap! Too long?	"Don't stop believin'!" What can I say, I'm nostalgic.
3 Where does Joel Quenneville rank in the city's title-winning coaches?	In the Chicago Hall of Coach Mustaches: behind Jackson and Ditka; ahead of Wannstedt.	Higher than Ozzie. Q's an understandable choice.	Almost legendary, or just a notch below his mustache.	Fifth behind Ditka, Phil, Ozzie, Papa Bear and Johnny "Red" Kerr.	With a trip to the playoffs and a championship, he's Ozzie Guillen without the profanity.
4 Who would be a better title sponsor for the Crosstown Classic than BP?	Is there a company named BM?	Not Trojans, who (allegedly) play dirtier than BP. Nothing good comes from Bush.	Etrade. I see a summer's worth of sponsorship opportunities.	Man, I'd rather have Mad Dog 20/20 as a sponsor at this point then those oily so-and-sos. Yeesh.	Given both team's seasons have been a disaster thus far, BP is actually perfect.
5 The World Cup has started. How could the U.S. surprise people?	By knowing soccer slang. Let's start with the unfortunate "bulge in the old onion bag."	If the U.S. doesn't ruin the British like it did with "The Office."	By apologizing to all the sea life in the Gulf, for starters.	By reminding them they have a good team this year! SUPPORT YOUR SQUAD, PEOPLE!	By actually watching a game or two and seeing why it's a worldly sport.

U.S. mad—for soccer

Associated Press

IRENE, South Africa The bars are stocked across America, and the pubs are getting ready in England. A 70 1/2-foot billboard of Clint Dempsey stands near Penn Station in Manhattan, and there's even a large poster of Landon Donovan in a store along Piccadilly Circus.

American soccer has never been more popular in the U.S. or its players more well-known across the world. And on Saturday comes the first competitive match between the U.S. and England since the great American upset at the 1950 World Cup. For one afternoon, millions will be watching from California to New York island. Like never before in the U.S., this is the sport's moment.

"I don't know what's going to be better, at the bar with my friends back home watching it, or actually playing it, because it's going to be special," goalkeeper Tim Howard said Thursday.

Thousands of tickets in refurbished 38,646-capacity Royal Bafokeng Stadium were purchased back in the U.S. for the match (1:30 p.m. Saturday, ABC). Stevan Galich, a fan from Chicago, organized transportation for 350 American fans from Sandton, a north Johannesburg suburb, to the stadium in Rustenburg on Saturday. His party plans to meet outside the stadium with Sam's Army and the American Outlaws, two supporters' groups. They hope to offset the roar from English fans.

Donald Gips, the U.S. ambassador to South Africa, said Sunday that FIFA estimated 132,000 tickets for the 64-game tournament were bought in the U.S., the most in any nation outside the host.

"Certainly the water-cooler talk, if I can use that expression, is greater than anything I've seen around the World Cup, around the U.S. being in it, and certainly around the U.S.-England game for sure," U.S. Soccer Federation president Sunil Gulati said. "The amount of time we're getting on ESPN. The cover of SI. The cover of ESPN The Magazine. The cover of Time Magazine. Anybody remember when that last happened for soccer?"

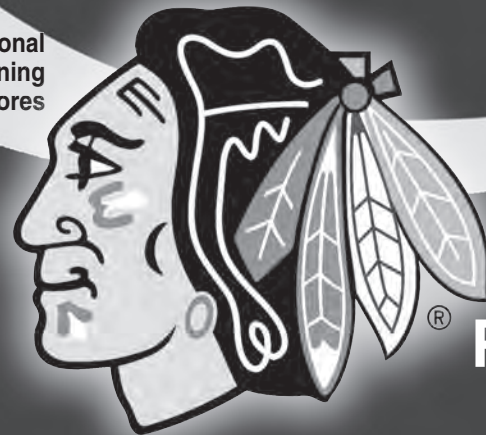

It's far different from 1990, when the U.S. team returned to the World Cup for the first time in 40 years and few American fans made the trek to Italy. There wasn't much to root for, with the U.S. losing three straight games.

"We thought we knew what the World Cup was. And you know what? Reality slapped us right in the face," said Marcelo Balboa, a defender on that U.S. team who is covering this tournament for the radio network Fútbol de Primera. "Soccer has just grown so much. Look at where we're at now, and look at where we stood in '90?"

Manager Lou Piniella leads the Cubs into the city series this weekend.
GETTY IMAGES

Where's the buzz?

With teams struggling, Crosstown Classic seems down

Chicago Tribune

In the beginning, the series survived and thrived on its newness.

And when that wore off, there was "The Fight" at home plate and "Ozzie's Rats," one World Series drought sated and the back-to-back battles of real first-place teams.

But what about now, as the Cubs-White Sox City Series starts its 13th season?

Exactly what do we have that's special?

How fitting for two dull teams seemingly going nowhere that they will play for a newly invented trophy sponsored by an oil company in crisis control, in Wrigley Field with a sign sponsored by a car company with public relations problems, on a day when another Chicago team is parading around its championship trophy. So what do we have?

Well, we have Cubs vs. Sox and a city still divided as North vs. South, at least according to the Cubs and Sox themselves.

So while the luster seems to have worn off, there still will be that buzz in Wrigley Field this week and U.S. Cellular Field two weeks hence.

"The only luster that has fallen off is the way the teams are playing," said Sox pitcher Mark Buehrle, who has seen them all since 2000 and is to start Saturday's game. "There's not very much excitement [leading up], but once we get there, the atmosphere will be there."

"The buildup, the media coverage before, may not be as big because teams aren't playing the best, but there's a lot of emotion and you want to show up for your fans. It's still a big deal for the city."

Maybe, but it would seem that baseball interest in the city this year could be relegated to the time between the very late end of the Blackhawks season and the much-anticipated beginning of Bears training camp.

JUNE 10, 2000 'The Pick'

Mark Grace fell victim to the old fake-to-third-throw-to-first gambit at a crucial moment. With the Cubs down a run in the eighth and Sammy Sosa on third, Sox reliever Sean Lowe feigned a throw to third before wheeling and firing to first to nab Grace, and the Sox held on to win 4-3. "It's either a heck of a move, or they got away with it," Grace said. "You're not going to get a tying-run balk at Comiskey Park. As a veteran ballplayer, I know that."

JUNE 28, 2002 Hard-headed

The Cubs built an 8-2 lead at Comiskey and had ace Kerry Wood on the mound, but a stray curveball woke a sleeping giant. After Wood conked Paul Konerko in the head with a pitch, leaving him with a walnut-sized welt on his noggin, the first baseman later slugged a pair of two-run homers, and the Sox rallied to win 13-9. "He's the type of guy that this type of stage, he thrives on," Sox manager Jerry Manuel said.

JUNE 27, 2003 Bombs away

Just as the Cubs sucked all the life out of U.S. Cellular Field by scoring two runs in the ninth to tie it 3-3, Jose Valentin rescued the Sox. He drilled a 430-foot home run off Antonio Alfonseca in the bottom of the ninth to send South Siders into a frenzy. And Valentin's demonstrative home run trot/celebration irked some Cubs players, who accused the Sox shortstop of mocking them.

MAY 20-21, 2005 Pass the ice packs

The opener of this three-game series at Wrigley set the tone as downright chippy. After Greg Maddux plunked Tadahito Iguchi two batters into the game, Freddy Garcia responded in kind. In the bottom of the first, Garcia brushed leadoff man Jerry Hairston Jr. before beaming Derrek Lee two batters later. One day later, an umpire's warning was delivered early after Carlos Zambrano hit Aaron Rowand and nicked A.J. Pierzynski.

MAY 20, 2006 'The Punch'

It was the punch heard 'round Chicago. Notorious agitator Pierzynski had just steamrolled Cubs catcher Michael Barrett, emphatically smacking home plate as he scored. As Barrett and Pierzynski exchanged words, Barrett landed a right hook on Pierzynski's jaw, igniting a bench-clearing incident that led to ejections and suspensions. The Sox got the last laugh, winning 7-0.

JUNE 28, 2009 Hurricane Carlos

Zambrano's antics stole the show in this wild affair at U.S. Cellular Field. Big Z plunked two Sox hitters, the second of which had both clubs ascending to the top of their respective dugout steps. But cooler heads prevailed in the 6-0 Sox win, even after John Danks hit a Cubs batter later in the game. "I don't want to get into what he said," Dewayne Wise said of Zambrano's mutterings as he went to first base after getting hit in the sixth.

Superficially satisfying—just like the '80s

Rules? These guys don't need no stinkin' rules. Still, evil-fighting rangers Hannibal (Liam Neeson), Face (Bradley Cooper), Murdock (Sharlto Copley) and Baracus (Quinton "Rampage" Jackson) do need to clear their names after they are framed for murder and the theft of plates used to print money.

The buzz: I was 4 when "The A-Team" TV show went off the air and have no prior feelings toward or knowledge of the series. Perhaps it's for people like me that director/co-writer Joe Carnahan updates the setting and doesn't lean on any '80sisms whatsoever.

The verdict: When "The A-Team" is fun, it's really fun. When it's not, like when people are talking, the movie brings to mind trash like "The Losers." The second half drags, calling too much attention to co-star Jessica Biel's terribleness—which is counteracted by a strutting turn from Patrick Wilson as a slippery CIA guy. The team, always being a step ahead, sucks out any sense of danger, but when they're working their magic and flying a tank through the air, "The A-Team" achieves the intended, playful frenzy.

No, Bradley Cooper wasn't fibbing last summer when he spent a big chunk of his time in between "The Hangover" denying questions that he was going to be in "The A-Team."

"Seriously, man, I wasn't lying," he says with a laugh. "People started asking me, and I knew nothing about it. So I said 'No.' But it was one of those weird things, the Internet rumors put my name in people's minds, and the next thing you know, I'm in the movie."

Fans were ahead of the curve in seeing

Cooper—of the bright-blue eyes, high-wattage smile and gym-rat physique—as "Face," the hustling, lady-killing pretty boy of "The A-Team." Big, beefy black actor willing to walk in Mr. T's B.A. shoes? Why not mixed-martial arts brawler-turned-actor "Rampage" Jackson? And if Hollywood was hunting for an older, cigar-chomping action hero, Liam Neeson was fresh off his sleeper hit "Taken."

"We really were on-the-nose casting, weren't we?" Cooper asks. "Especially Sharlto."

Wait. Sharlto? Sharlto Copley, the South

African who came to stardom thanks to the sci-fi hit "District 9"? He can't have been on anybody's list when thinking of the crazed, Southern-accented pilot Murdock in the movie from director Joe Carnahan.

"Oh, I had friends I was sure were perfect for Murdock," Cooper admits. "But this guy, that 'District 9' came out, and then it turned out he was the biggest fan of the old TV show of all of us!"

Copley, 36, says he always wanted to be Murdock, who was played by Dwight Schultz on TV. "I was so into it I even had a gang in school, my little 'A-Team' gang when I was 10 years old," he says. "Loved the show! When I heard they were making it, I did an improv audition in my hotel room, just trying some things out as Murdock."

The TV series, with its "problem solving" mercenaries for hire, came out during the Reagan era. What's in the zeitgeist today that suggests "The A-Team" return? Aside from Mexican drug wars, Iraq and military "contractor" chicanery, all covered in the film?

"The thing that says the '80s about the series to me, that we've tried to recapture, is that emphasis on iconic characters," Copley says. "None of us got to be in a 'Beverly Hills Cop,' 'Die Hard,' 'Lethal Weapon.' Those were action films, action comedies, really. But the emphasis was on the characters—larger than life, funny, handy with a gun."

The guns were the trickiest things for all involved, says Cooper, 35 and new to action films.

"When you're acting, your body has a tendency to tense up," he says. "You fight that. And when you're handling a gun, it's a real fight to keep from tensing up. You can't flinch. The swagger can't come through. The viewer has to believe that shootouts are commonplace for these guys."

Did they pull it off? With film fanboys having had a hand in casting it, expect the box office to register their enthusiasm.

And if the audience says so, "We'll all be back for another one," says Cooper, who already has a "Hangover 2" in the works. "But man, to get back in this kind of shape? That's sacrifice."

Cooper cut out sugar, salt and flour and did tough two-hour workouts with a trainer every day for six months prior to and during the shoot, he told Details magazine.

"As the movie progressed, I got in increasingly better shape," he said in the magazine. "There's this one fight scene with Liam Neeson toward the end, where it's, like, the apex of the work ... I swear to God, it looked like my head was digitally superimposed onto someone else's body."

5 remakes we don't want to see

It's too late for "The A-Team" or "The Karate Kid," two 1980s-era productions that get a glossy makeover in theaters Friday. It's not too late, however, for other beloved '80s creations. We simply will not tolerate remakes of any of these. METROMIX, REDEYE

'FAST TIMES AT RIDGEMONT HIGH'

"Fast Times" is just too good to be recreated. Let's be honest: The combo of young acting talent that broke as a result of this movie (Forest Whitaker, Sean Penn, Phoebe Cates and, OK, Judge Reinhold) simply can't be replicated with today's teen/young adult actors. What, is Miley Cyrus going to play Stacy Hamilton with Robert Pattinson as Spicoli? Come on!

'ALF'

ALF crash-landed in the Tanner family's garage and decided to brighten their lives—and our TV screens—with his burping, cat-eating and sarcastic wit. Laugh if you will, but a slick, CGI-created ALF—or hells no, a 3-D ALF—would never be as funny as this oversized puppet with a bad attitude.

'CADDYSHACK'

It's inevitable that Hollywood will remake, and ruin, every movie we have ever loved. By far the most depressing will be when someone tackles the immortal "Caddyshack." We do not want to see Zach Galifianakis as Carl Spackler. We do not want Taylor Swift as Lacey Underall. And the only person who ever could have played Judge Smalls (Phil Hartman) is no longer with us. We're begging you, producers, look the other way.

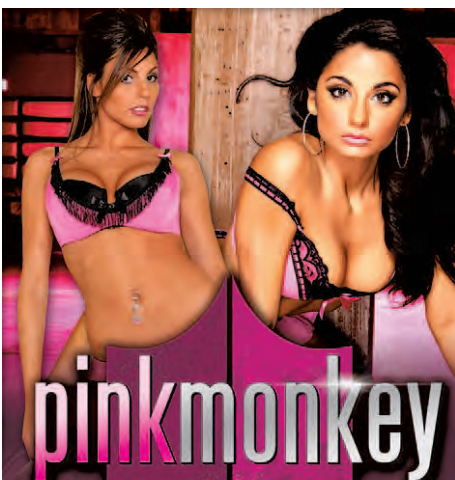

'FERRIS BUELLER'S DAY OFF'

Easily one of the defining movies set and shot in Chicago, our by-far-favorite John Hughes comedy never could be redone and capture the same sense of good-natured rebellion. We don't care how charming Zac Efron is; don't let him try to muster a manageable version of what Matthew Broderick already perfected.

'WHEN HARRY MET SALLY'

Whether men and women can be friends is a question that will remain forever relevant, but we just couldn't bear to see the classic romantic comedy remake with anyone other than Meg Ryan and Billy Crystal in the leads. Do you really think anyone else could pull off that famous "I'll have what she's having" deli scene and not feel like a pale imitation?

Splice
WARNER BROS. PICTURES

SPLICE

@MrsSuperBadJ: Ok SPLICE WAS GOOD
@decko5: "Splice"—stoner looking scientists and the future of bestiality and incest = very entertaining even if it's not your thing.

@gonzalodelriov: Saw the genetic freak show of SPLICE. Freaky, yes! SPLICE = SPECIES + THE CRYING GAME + PARENTHOOD. Film leaves an impression!

@WonderWomanV2: Splice: 2 genius scientists play God a la Frankenstein, create a mutated Katie Holmes & proceed 2 make very un-genius-like choices

GET HIM TO THE GREEK

@amorow: Get Him to the Greek—movie was ok, but songs like The Clap and Bangers, Mash and Beans make it worth seeing.

@georgethagreek: Get Him to the Greek. Fantastically funny w/ a slight dramatic tone. This years Forgetting Sarah Marshall. I give it two beers up @brittcohen1: get me to the greek, HORRIBLE! There was 2 good parts 2 the whole movie. Very overated, but I did like Diddy, he was funny! #FAIL!

@beebotsteph: Get Him to the Greek—Surprisingly funny. Story teeters off towards the end, but still worthwhile.

@EllieAbrams: Get Him To Greek had a few funny parts. Overall: Bad. Doesn't hold a candle to The Hangover or Sarah Marshall.

OTHERS

@oh_mg: "Micmacs"—brilliant satire of arms trade. Serious but funny and endearing. Same colorful, magical quality as "Amelie."

@revafriedel: saw SATC2: Carrie stuck in '98 & the rest of the girls have moved on in this brain-dead sequel to the unnecessary 1st movie.

New 'Kid' has the chops

The Orlando Sentinel

"The kid" won't turn 12 until July. But he's his old man's son. Jaden Smith has a wisecrack at the ready when asked about how absurdly ripped he got for his new film, the remake of "The Karate Kid."

"Hey man, you know, I gotta keep it nice for the ladies, you know?" he says. "Learned THAT from Jackie!"

"Jackie" would be Jackie Chan, the world-famous, world-wise martial arts comic who is Jaden's co-star in "The Karate Kid." The remake, reset in Chan's China, has Jackie as Mr. Han, a reclusive building superintendent who teaches the bullied Dre (Jaden) martial arts. But did that mentoring extend to off camera, say, when Jaden—son of Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith—got his first screen kiss?

"He didn't give me too much advice, not good advice, anyway," Jaden says. Chan is sitting right next to him. "But my dad? He did. He said, 'Don't KISS with your MOUTH open!' Definitely too young for that."

They've got this Jackie-and-Jaden act down pat. Give them a hard time about this new "Karate Kid's" two hours and 15 minutes running time.

"The movie's not long enough? Come on, Jaden, let's do a song. 'Wiiiise men say, oooooonly fools rush in ...'" Chan, 56, has had a pop-star career in China. And Jaden's dad cranked out some hit singles in his day.

But the kid isn't having it and won't pitch in. Which makes Chan's next point for him.

"Every child should learn martial arts, any martial art—karate, judo, aikido, Chinese kung fu," Chan says. "If they do, they will respect themselves, their parents and others. They will respect life, everything. You don't learn that discipline, that self-respect, you could be just another wild kid on the streets, a bully. Martial arts can teach you right from wrong."

Did Jaden learn any R-E-S-P-E-C-T from making this movie, which his parents produced?

"Here's the respect I learned from martial arts. I realized how lucky I was to be their son."

Amen to that. Smith has the major motion pictures "Pursuit of Happyness" (with his dad) and "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (with Keanu Reeves) and now a "Karate Kid" under his belt. And he's still only 11. He loved learning martial arts, "especially that high-stretch kick."

Jaden can talk about how he's chosen acting as a "career," but again, he's just 11. Things change. But Chan is frank about where this new film places him.

"I want to continue to make movies. But how can I continue fighting in movies? I am getting older. I have always wanted to be a true actor, so this is the time to do that," he says. "I want to be the Asian Robert De Niro or Dustin Hoffman."

'Kid' has some fight, but it reinforces stereotypes

Bullies have their eyes and fists on 12-year-old Dre (Jaden Smith) after he and his mom (Taraji P. Henson) move from Detroit to Beijing. Luckily Dre's maintenance man (Jackie Chan, who shouldn't be fighting kids) also is a kung fu master willing to teach Dre discipline and the art of defending himself.

The buzz: On the one hand, the world could use some new kids' sports movies. On the other, how about a new idea, not a reboot of the beloved 1984 flick that already has had a few sequels and a late-arriving revamp starring Hilary Swank?

The verdict: This might've been OK in a few years, when Smith grows into a stronger screen presence and his flirtation with a local girl, with whom he pinky-swears to attend each other's big events, wouldn't be so forgettably mild. "The Karate Kid" maintains the original's sense of loneliness in a new place and the mental and physical oppression of bullying. Yet the racial and geographical changes inevitably call into question why Dre is picked on in the first place—something the movie, of course, isn't out to acknowledge—and reinforces Asian stereotypes when Dre says, "It's China, mom; everybody knows kung fu." MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES PRODUCER

50 Cent's big change

MCT

Photos of a shockingly slender 50 Cent surfaced on the Web recently, showing the normally beefy rapper down to 160 pounds from his usual 214.

The rapper, born Curtis Jackson, lost the weight to play a cancer-stricken football player in the upcoming film "Things Fall Apart." The weight-loss regimen included a liquid diet and lots of cardio on the treadmill, in addition to headlining a UK tour during his preparation for the film.

"The cardio suppressed my appetite, which was good, but by the end of the tour my energy level was really low," Jackson said by telephone from L.A. "I'd get up in the morning, do a little workout and go back to sleep and then do the show, which was like a cardio workout."

He's proud and excited about the film, which also features Mario Van Peebles and Ray Liotta.

"It's the most prepared I've ever been for a film," he says, adding that he drew inspiration from actors such as Robert De Niro and Christian Bale, who also underwent physical transformations for film roles.

Film is an increasingly large part of Jackson's schedule. He has set up a production company and says he's working on a deal with a major studio to develop films, which may or may not feature him acting.

"I'm looking to produce and finance my own film ideas," he says.

He's touring the U.S. now and back up to his fighting weight. Getting back to his old dining habits took some time as well, though.

To celebrate completing filming on "Things Fall Apart," he treated himself to a steak at The Chop House in Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I ordered a 12-ounce steak and ate about 4 ounces," he says. "My stomach shrank. Then I went to a sports bar and fell asleep."

Can Chiropractic Help Me? HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

We are often asked, "What's the best way of finding out whether or not a doctor of chiropractic can help my problem?" We believe the answer can be found in a complete chiropractic consultation and examination, including x-rays. And to help find out for sure, we will do a complete consultation and examination, including x-rays, if necessary, (procedures that normally cost $250 or more) for only $25. We will make this special program available through June. The only exception to the offer involves personal injury cases (workers' compensation and auto accidents) in which there is no charge directly to the patient.

YOUR INITIAL VISIT WILL INCLUDE:

- A private consultation with the doctor.
- X-rays, if necessary.
- A thorough spinal examination including orthopedic & neurological test.
- A confidential report of our findings.
- An explanation of our treatment procedure if we determine chiropractic can help you.
- A REFERRAL TO THE PROPER SPECIALIST IF WE DETERMINE CHIROPRACTIC CAN'T HELP YOU.

THESE CONDITIONS ARE SOME OF THE DANGER SIGNALS:

- Headache
- Arthritic pain by stiff neck
- Loss of sleep
- Scoliosis (Curvature of the spine)
- Leg pain & numbness
- Arm pain & numbness
- Backache
- Fatigue
- Tension
- Whiplash injury

If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, call our office today for an appointment.

COMEDY

Wanda Sykes

When: 7:30 p.m. SaturdayWhere: The Venue, Horseshoe Casino, 777 Casino Center Drive, Hammond, Ind.Tickets: $31.50-$56.50 at 800-745-3000 and ticketmaster.com

Boy, if you want to talk about stacking the cards against you, take a look at Wanda Sykes. Already an African-American woman trying to stamp out her place in the male-dominated world of stand up comedy as well as in the film and TV industry, she then proceeds to mother twins and marry her girlfriend, Alex.

The result: Her own talk show, a GLAAD award and, most importantly, holding steady, as Entertainment Weekly proclaimed, as one of the 25 Funniest People in America. Maybe there's a new Hollywood prototype in town. TRIBUNE

ALBUM

'The Twilight Saga: Eclipse Soundtrack'

In stores

Can we raise a cheer for Team Alexandra? For "The Twilight Saga: Eclipse Soundtrack," music supervisor Alexandra Patsavas curates another collection of smart, dramatic gals and hip, quirky guys. The women clearly win this time out with the lush "Heavy in Your Arms" from Florence and The Machine and the anthemic "Eclipse" from Metric. But Muse's Queen-ish bombast on "Neutron Star Collision" is thrilling, and The Black Keys build a nice groove on "Chop and Change" on the men's side, making the third soundtrack in the series the best yet. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

VIDEO

'Dancing on My Own' Robyn

Watch at vimeo.com

Swedish pop-rebel Robyn is releasing three albums in 2010, and the single "Dancing on My Own" comes from the first of those, "Body Talk Pt. 1." The track, which uses a glimmering-techno backdrop to propel Robyn's sad tale about watching the dude she has a crush on dancing with another chick, is apparently a result of "her love of inherently sad, gay disco anthems such as Ultravox's 'Dancing With Tears in My Eyes,' Sylvester and Donna Summer." The video follows that theme pretty closely, as we watch Robyn pull off some super-aerobic dance moves while looking like she's just about to cry. ALISTAIR DICKINSON, POPMATTERS.COM

FASHION

Juicy Couture striped silk — cotton ruffle tunic

$148 at Bloomingdales

It may be time to trade in those old cut-offs and bar-crawl T-shirt for a bit more sophisticated swimsuit coverup. A tunic always is a good choice. Offering more coverage than a T but staying short enough to wear poolside, this shirtdress is much more grown-up cabana wear. JOANNA GUSTAFSON FOR REDEYE

'True Blood' star loves vamping it up

As Pam the vampire on HBO's "True Blood," Kristin Bauer sinks her teeth into every caustic quip and sardonic bon mot the fashion-forward Fangtasia boss utters.

From the minute she first appeared at the side of Eric, her business and sparring partner, Pam became a fan favorite and one of the most memorable sources of comic relief on the show.

And although everyone's making a big hairy deal of the werewolves roaming throughout the upcoming Season 3, personally I'm more thrilled that Bauer has been upgraded to a series regular. She makes an eye-popping entrance in Sunday's premiere—tossing some sexually suggestive looks at Sookie (Anna Paquin) and battling, as usual, with Eric (Alexander Skarsgard).

Bauer doesn't have to stretch far to create Pam's nasty attitude, she said.

"Sadly, that was just in me," the actress, who grew up in Racine, Wis., told me recently. "I don't know why that is, but to play a bitch is just so much fun."

"Maybe it's because of my good Midwestern upbringing, there are so many things I'd like to say to so many people. And I don't. Ninety-nine percent of the time I'm very good. And all of a sudden, they're just paying you to be awful. It's just such a great relief."

Bauer, who was incredibly pleasant and funny during our phone chat, said Pam and Eric definitely mix it up this season, but fans also will see Pam's "incredibly sensitive side—for one person." And that, of course, is her maker, Eric. Bauer likened their relationship to that of a father and daughter—but also to a "100-year marriage."

"I think Pam and Eric get to do the most fun stuff," Bauer said. "They're not nice too each other, but ... they're really closer to each other than anybody else. And that was really fun to see and to act."

Bauer didn't want to give much away, but she teased that Pam starts a relationship with someone other than Eric this season, mentors Deborah Ann Woll's baby vamp Jessica and bullies Nelsan Ellis' Lafayette. But it's the scenes with sexy Skarsgard that Bauer enjoys the most.

"He's big, beautiful. He's funny, he's smart, he's kind," she said. "I feel extremely lucky that he is the one I'm glued to."

Crosstown food-off

Forget baseball stats; which team has the best food?

By Lisa Balde

This weekend, the Cubs and White Sox meet again to temporarily settle their decades-old rivalry during the season's first Crosstown Classic at Wrigley Field. Runs will be earned, opposite-team fans will be heckled, and this year, a trophy will be awarded. Come June 25-27 at U.S. Cellular Field, we expect more of the same. Amid the din of the game, a more paramount question: What are you eating? We break down options at both parks, beyond the basic dogs and peanuts. You decide the winner.

WRIGLEY FIELD

U.S. CELLULAR FIELD

NEW

The High Plains Bison cheeseburger ($8), made with grass-fed bison meat from the Ricketts' Wyoming ranch, topped this year's substantial list of menu additions. Find it at Sheffield Grill, now open to the public. Lovers of two-handed sammies should look no further than the new Italian Cub Sub ($6.75), piled with ham, capicola and salami. Get it at Italian Hot Spot, Blue W and Big Hits vendors.

The biggest food news at the Cell since Wow Bao's hot Asian buns ($5 for two) made their Cell debut this season is the June 1 unveiling of popular Portage Park slow-smoked barbecue joint Smoque BBQ. If you have LG Skyline Club Level tickets, choose from brisket and pulled pork sandwiches and drool-worthy sides. Other new eats for all ticket holders? Sausage patty burgers ($6.25) throughout the park.

SAUSAGE

Baseball's quintessential hot dog got a North Side twist, thanks again to High Plains Bison ranches. Buy bison dogs ($5.25) at grill carts throughout the park, or try one of two bison foot-longs ($7): regular with your choice of cart toppings, or the Bison Buffalo, served with blue cheese coleslaw and buffalo wing sauce.

With fan-favorite Italian ($5) and Polish sausages ($4.75) on concessions menus, hot dogs already are only half the story at the Cell. Upping the ante this year are three kinds of Niman Ranch-made sausages ($7.50 each) on the park's club level: apple Gouda, chipotle cheddar and spicy Italian.

SNACKS

Last year, Wrigley made way for two pounds of dough in the meant-to-be-shared North Side Twist ($15), served in a pizza box with chipotle mustard, sweet cinnamon cream and beer cheese sauces. This year, it's back, at the Blue W and CC's Frozen Drinks. For something more manageable, order up deep-fried, cheese-topped pretzel bites ($4.50), new this year.

The infamous two-pound pretzel made its way south this year to debut on Sox turf. Here, it's called the Victory Knot pretzel ($15), also served with chipotle mustard, cinnamon cream and beer cheese. For something sweeter, try funnel fries ($4), funnel cake fingers with dipping sauces.

VEG-FRIENDLY

Both parks sell the same well-loved veggie burger ($6.25), a black-bean patty with barbecue sauce. New this season is the chopped vegetable salad ($6) stocked with romaine and spinach leaf lettuce and lots of veg-lovin' goodies on top.

PETA gave the Cell an honorable mention this month in its 2010 list of Vegetarian Friendly Ballparks, for the veggie burger and its veggie hot dogs ($3.75), burritos and wraps. To be fair, both Wrigley and the Cell made the 2009 list.

BEER

Branch out beyond Bud at Brew House stands, which carry a rotating lineup of Pacifico, Red Bridge, Guinness, Labatt Blue and Red Stripe.

Not a Miller fan? Find Guinness, Stella Atois, Bell's Oberon, Dundee Honey Brown and more at Beers of the World stands.

DINING NEWS TICKER

» All-natural burger joint Epic Burger opened a second city location Monday in Lincoln Park.
» Gastro-Wagon opened Wednesday in Edgewater. The eatery will supply street eats to chef Matt Maroni's mobile food truck when it launches.

» Longtime Carnivale chef Mark Mendez announced that he'll be leaving at the end of the summer to open his own restaurant, a casual wine bar focused on more authentic Spanish food.
» Christian Phernetton, former executive chef at recently shuttered Old Town Brasserie, has taken over as executive chef at Little Bucharest Bistro.

» Nana chef Guy Meikle formally launched dinner service last weekend after a limited soft-launch last week.

The scoop

Insider intelligence on food and drink at Wrigley Field and U.S. Cellular Field

- » Get to Wrigley Field as the gates open two hours before the game, and score 25 percent off food and non-alcoholic drinks for the first hour.
- » Sheffield Grill at Wrigley Field will feature Crosstown-themed menu items and specialty drinks such as North Side hard ice tea.
- » Save money on beer at the Cell by buying 24-ounce bombers in the Bullpen Sports Bar. It's cheaper than buying the same amount on the concourse, and the Bullpen is a great spot to spend a rain delay.
- » Don't like your respective team's food? You can bring your own. Seriously. Check your team's website for rules.

Counoise: Your new best bottle

Don't hesitate to bring a nice bottle to Chilapan, a vibrant, 2-month-old BYOB in Logan Square. The Mexican spot, named for a town in Veracruz, Mexico, is a step up from a neighborhood taqueria, with attentive servers swiftly offering glass stemware to wine-toting diners.

Chilapan's owners also managed to fit a lot of outdoor seating onto the tiny corner at Armitage and Campbell. Though the 20-seat sidewalk cafe is under the Blue Line "L" tracks, periodic overhead clatter doesn't detract from the experience—if anything, a pause in conversation during a brief noisy spell provides a great opportunity to spoon up some more of the restaurant's rich flan ($5.50).

As Chilapan continues to charm the neighborhood crowd, keep an eye out for dishes such as the delicious rebozo (named for women's shawls often used to carry anything from produce to children) full of grilled peppers and steak ($7.25), stewed chicken enchiladas doused in pungent mole ($6.95) and the rollito de espinaca ($17.49, below).

Bring it: Like tucked-away restaurants, some obscure grape varietals never receive the popular acclaim they deserve. Yet just as Chilapan is sure to win fans, lately I've been hoping that one of my favorite grapes, counoise, will get more love.

Because it inhabits the "huh?"

end of the list of 13 permitted varietals in Chateauf-neuf-du-Pape blends, counoise is rarely bottled alone. But the 2006 Domaine Monpertuis "Vignoble de la Ramiere-Cuvée Counoise" ($15), a Rhone-area "country wine" (vin de pays du Gard) is 100 percent counoise. Though that leaves it outside the realm of France's complicated appellation system, or AOC, this puppy's got pedigree: Vines are grown by producer Paul Jeune, who decided to give counoise a shout out with a simultaneously spry and rustic bottling.

The wine ages in stainless steel and large neutral barrels, so flavors are clean and straightforward, with hallmark Rhone herbs on the nose, unfettered by assertive new oak—and the soft tannins play especially well with the earthy mole over those chicken enchiladas.

@NickGorski
I have to decide between seeing the Strokes' return to Chicago or the @LadyGaga spectacle on Friday night??? COME ON!

@lovechicago1210:
definitely pumped about GAGA!!!

@BerniMacMac
I'll prob buy tix for lady GaGa & sneak in the other days haha

@cvanderoef

I'm upset that Green Day is opposite Phoenix, and Hockey overlaps Hot Chip but the rest looks pretty awesome!

FACEBOOK

Rudy Segovia
I want to see 2Many DJs, Lady Gaga, and The Strokes, but they're at the same time on Friday. Think I'm gonna watch 35 minutes of each and run from stage to stage

Janet Espinoza
will there be extra porta pottys? Can I have my OWN?? lol

Jorge Toro
i was absolutely excited about the schedule, it is printed out and at my desk drawer at work!

Ryan V Brinkerhoff
i'm much more excited about the Just For Laughs.

Snakes, sex and Skywalker

By Emily Rosenbaum Maka

REDEYE

The Dark Side is a drug that apparently hooked Darth Vader, French researchers tell us. What else did we learn this week in celebrity and entertainment news? Well, a sex tape is nothing to be ashamed of and there's no reason not to develop a marginally funny bit into a full-blown movie.

SNOOZE

STRANGE

SATISFYING

SILLY

REUTERS

Tropic blunder

Tom Cruise's Les Grossman character was funny for about five minutes in "Tropic Thunder." Watching Cruise stroke his own ego in an extended Grossman bit at the MTV Movie Awards was irritating. An entire movie built around this annoying, bellowing, egomaniacal movie producer sounds really dull. But that's exactly what Hollywood is doing.

GETTY IMAGES

Don't hassel the Hoff!

Comedy Central is set to roast David Hasselhoff in August. After the disturbing video of him drunkenly eating a burger while his teenage daughter filmed him, this should be one very awkward roast. Perhaps the comedians will focus instead on his questionable music career and his popularity in Germany.

GETTY IMAGES

Anger management

If only Anakin Skywalker had had some couch time. Skywalker's transformation into Darth Vader in the "Star Wars" movies was the result of a borderline personality disorder, according to a new study by French psychiatrists. Skywalker was predisposed to the condition due to his separation from his parents at an early age. At last we have our answer.

GETTY IMAGES

Sex sells

Danielle Staub, one of "The Real Housewives of New Jersey," isn't terribly bothered by her sex tape being sold by Hustler to whatever weirdo wants to shell out some bucks to look at her parts, real and fake. She tells tmz.com that she hopes her tape outsells one made by fellow reality star Kendra Wilkinson. A race to the bottom—classy.

GETTY IMAGES

Woman on the verge

Salma Hayek, Maria Bello and Maya Rudolph were chatting with "Extra" about the movie "Grown Ups" when they noticed a snake had crawled into their outdoor interview space. Hayek (above) flipped out and attempted to climb on top of Rudolph. Odd behavior from a woman who danced with an albino python wrapped around her in "From Dusk Till Dawn."

"Listen, I'm not concerned. I think the Celtics are a good team. I respect them, but they're going to get their balls smashed in, and it's just a fact."

Actor Jonah Hill, appearing on "The Dan Patrick Show," on what he thinks his beloved L.A. Lakers will do to Boston in the NBA Finals

Caught in the hair net

Katherine Heigl
GETTY IMAGES

Katherine Heigl continues her puzzling weird hair tour. First she unveiled the Shirley Temple, a style more appropriate for a 15-year-old, at the "Killers" premiere in Los Angeles last week, and now we have the bouffant. The bouffant, which aged her about 15 years, made its appearance at the "Killers" premiere in London on Wednesday night. What can we expect next? The faux-hawk? The bowl cut?

Knocking our socks off

The heat of "True Blood" comes naturally. "I think that one great bonus is that we don't need a fluffer," Stephen Moyer, who plays vampire Bill, brags to EW about his scenes with his fiancée, Anna Paquin. New castmate Joe Manganiello, who plays werewolf Alcide, says he quickly got used to taking it all off. "I will say that I was welcomed into the brotherhood of the sock. When you're naked on the show, you have to wear a sock, and it's not on your foot."

DIGIT 26 MILLION

That's how many online votes have been tallied to help determine a new show on OWN, the Oprah Winfrey Network. More than 1,500 TV-host wannabes showed up in suburban New York this past weekend to audition for "Your Own Show: Oprah's Search for the Next TV Star." There are 2,600 online entries so far, the L.A. Times reports.

First couple of music

Jay-Z opens up a bit about Beyonce in Rolling Stone's new cover story. "Sometimes on creative stuff, one of us will ask, 'Do you think this is cool?'" Jay-Z says of his wife of two years. "She's a magnificent A&R, if she ever decides to do that, for things like pitch. So I defer to her on those sort of questions."

What's up with that?

When in doubt, put a dude in a dress. Kenan Thompson showed up at the CMT Awards on Wednesday night dressed as Reba McEntire, whom he has played on "Saturday Night Live." Then Reba walked out in the same dress. "You can't be Reba, you're too dark," she said. "Um, pardon?" "I'm ginger with highlights," Reba said, "And you're a solid auburn!"
